CAMS Therapy and the Power of Intention

An interesting paper found on the Pub Med database recently caught my attention. Although the complete article was in Spanish, the English abstract provided evidence for the emission of light (photons) as the mechanism of action behind intention. This is the first time (to my knowledge) that such a mechanism has been identified. The abstract identified intention as:

highly coherent frequencies capable of changing the molecular structure of matter.

Interestingly, the paper also mentioned the fact that "living beings are mutually synchronized to the earth." These ideas are in complete harmony with the underlying principles behind the CAMS technology. CAMS devices use light (photons) to carry the healing intentions of the user along with the resonant frequency of the earth. The therapy re-establishes coherence in the human energy field which is the first step to changing physical matter at a molecular level and to restoring health. The author of the above paper concludes:

Thought and consciousness are emerging as fundamental aspects and not as mere epiphenomena that are rapidly leading to a profound change in the paradigms of Biology and Medicine.

I wholeheartedly agree. Much research has been conducted on the subject of intention in the last decade. Many studies have now established the power of intention-based healing. However, most of the research has been conducted using those with proven skills (healers, meditators, and/or those trained in focused intention). The ability to focus and to manifest a healing outcome has, until now, been limited to a few individuals who either have exceptional gifts or who have devoted a great deal of time to the development of such skills. CAMS devices are able to amplify and focus anyone's healing intention. The CAMS technology effectively makes up the difference between one who is skilled and one who simply chooses to participate in the process. The therapy is initiated by exhaling rapidly through the nose with the mouth closed (the equivalent of a short "snort") which further focuses the energy of intent.

CAMS therapy is a quantum leap in energy medicine, providing a non-invasive method that incorporates the latest science with the power of the human heart/mind for the restoration of health. It represents the "profound change in the paradigm of Biology and Medicine" referred to by the author of the above article.
